Dear sir or madam,

Acting under the Tunney Act, I hereby publicly submit my comments about the Microsoft settlement. I feel that the proposed settlement with Microsoft is a very bad idea.

Considering the anti-competitive damage that Microsoft has done, as has been well-documented in your records, I think the fairest settlement involves opening the document formats for Microsoft Office programs, making public the source code for all past and future versions of Microsoft Windows and Internet Explorer, and offering cash to every licensee of a Microsoft Windows product.

Thank you for the time you take with this e-mail.

Sincerely,

Andrew Kuster
